If you assume that the household computer has a 2GHZ processor, and the machine you are using takes 100cycles per brute force against a single 56-bit DES key, or 128 bit AES key. Estimate the time needed to crack DES by testing all possible 2_{56} (2 to the power of 56) possible keys. Make the similar estimate for 128 bit AES key.